EXAMINER SUPPORTS CAMPAIGN

The At-Fort-Mason Capital Campaign is a $7.5 million fund-raising effort to complete major renovations projects within the historic Piers and Landmark Buildings of Fort Mason Center. We would like to share with you the following editorial which appeared in the San Francisco Examiner on April 22, 1987.

Renewal for Fort Mason

FOR YEARS, Fort Mason on the San Francisco waterfront was the embarkation point for troops and military supplies to points in the Pacific. Since 1977, it has been a focal point of a different sort, a major cultural center for residents and visitors in the Bay Area.

The transformation of Fort Mason reflects the very best of San Francisco. It has served as a national model for converting surplus facilities, and it has spawned imitators around the world. The 13-acre site is home to 52 nonprofit arts, educational and environmental groups, ranging from the Magic Theatre and the Mexican Museum to the Oceanic Society. Some 450 other groups use the facilities. In all, 15,000 events are held there yearly, attracting an estimated 1.7 million visitors.

The complex was built between 1911 and 1924, and is showing wear. With Mayor Feinstein as the honorary chairperson, and under the direction of business and civic leaders, Fort Mason Center has launched a $7.5 million fund-raising drive to renovate and transform the fort's vast interior spaces. Called the At-Fort-Mason-Capital-Campaign, it has raised $4 million in direct contributions, largely from Bay Area foundations and corporate sponsors. The Examiner endorses the campaign and urges continuing donations.

The sponsors' goal is to create high-quality facilities to match the groups that use them. Ten projects comprise the core of the Fort Mason campaign, including a 30,000-square-foot exhibition hall and a festival pavilion to provide up to 70,000 square feet of space for presentations drawing up to 5,000 people. Under the plan, the six performing theaters would be remodeled, galleries would be upgraded, a media center with a screening room would be included and a maritime education building would be developed.

The Fort Mason complex is financially self-sufficient, which is unusual for a nonprofit entity. But it cannot raise additional funds for renovation through rent increases that would defeat the original purpose of the center — which is to provide a low-cost home for community-based organizations. Such cheap quarters allow low-budget organizations to put their energies and limited resources into their work, rather than rent. The relentless development of the Bay Area is putting pressure on nonprofit groups housed in warehouses and unused factories, making Fort Mason not just attractive but necessary to sustain our cultural organizations.

Fort Mason has proved to be vital and exciting. The capital campaign allows it to become a showplace, as well. Cities around the world are scrambling to replicate Fort Mason-type projects in their communities. We already have it. We need to support it.

MOVING ON . . .

In June, two of Fort Mason Foundation's most visible and valuable staff members will depart what is sometimes called Asphalt State Park for greener pastures. A. E. "Zack" Zacharias—Comptroller for six years—and Andrea Jepson—Director of Operations for four years—will wind up their official involvement with us on June 1.

Zack came to Fort Mason in 1981, planning to spend two or three years helping us develop the systems and procedures we needed as Fort Mason grew from a developing cultural center into a national model. It has been a learning experience for Zack and all of us which far exceeded our expectations. Zack learned to deal with a constituency very different from that which he had encountered during his many years as a corporate comptroller. And we learned to adjust to someone who knew that "hard copy"—not blind faith—was essential if Fort Mason were to operate smoothly and realize its potential. We have all learned to accept and appreciate the other and have grown and benefitted from our differences.

Andrea Jepson and A. E. "Zack" Zacharias will leave Fort Mason on June 1 for Hawaiian sunsets and green fairways.

Zack's most recent accomplishment was the development of a comprehensive computerized information system to help us as we continue growing. With that nearly done, Zack feels it's time to set his sights on golf in Sonoma and elsewhere, and to start enjoying himself. We will all miss Zack a great deal, and wish him straight fairways, smooth greens, and no bad lies.

Andrea came to Fort Mason in 1983, and has shepherded our operation through a very dramatic and challenging four years. She has helped foster relationships in Fort Mason and between Fort Mason and the broader community that have helped people see the Center as an integral part of the Bay Area's cultural life.

Andrea has worked successfully to build an excellent working relationship with the GGNRA staff, and has built a cohesive and dedicated facilities staff. During Andrea's tenure, community cultural events, festivals and benefits in the piers have tripled, having a real impact on the Fort Mason program.

Her most recent work has been managing the major renovations in Piers 2 and 3, projects on a scale much greater than anything we have done in our short history. She has represented Fort Mason with contractors, and has kept the project moving so that it will be completed in time for summer and fall commitments.

Most significantly, Andrea has a real love for Fort Mason and the people who work here and use the facilities, and this has affected the experience people have at Fort Mason.

Andrea is now turning towards Hawaii, where she will be moving in July. We will miss her dearly, but will continue to benefit from all she has done.

NEW IMAGES OF FORT MASON

An aerial photograph of Fort Mason Center served as the inspiration for a special class project at the Academy of Art College in San Francisco. Students in Graphic Design Workshop I were asked to experiment, using the photograph, to come up with a new abstract visual image of Fort Mason.

Nancy Hoffman, a graphic designer with Stein Designers/Consultants who also teaches at the Academy, came up with the idea. "The intrigue is that all the students were given the same information," said Hoffman. "They were asked to take this photograph and make four visual translations of it, using only points, line, solid plane, or texture as the sole visual language."

When these drawings were completed, the students then made a final composite graphic. "The result is a series of provocative works which communicate the spirit and identity of Fort Mason in refreshing and contemporary ways," said Hoffman.

"These images are wonderful. They can be creatively used in a number of ways to promote the Center. We are thankful to Nancy Hoffman and the artists for giving us such a great gift," said Marc Kasky, Executive Director of Fort Mason Center.

The students in the spring session of the workshop are at various levels in their study. Some are in their second year, while others are at the graduate level. Most of them are currently studying graphic design as their major emphasis.

About twenty of the designs will be on display in the main lobby of the Fort Mason Center office in Building A throughout the month of June, open Monday through Saturday, from 9am to 5pm. A special reception for the artists will be held in the lobby on Friday, June 5, from 5 to 8pm. For information, call 441-5706.

SUMMER ACTIVITIES FOR CHILDREN

In addition to hundreds of events offered every month for adults, there are also many activities planned exclusively for children this summer. Here are just a few.

Make-A-Circus, a unique outdoor event for the whole family, appears in parks all over the Bay Area. But it's not just a standard circus. Each show includes workshops for children and adults, and after crash courses in acrobatics, clowning and ropewalking, members of the audience take to the ring and become the performers. In addition, the professional troupe presents a show with a specific theme, reminiscent of the old medicine shows, which emphasizes topics like a healthy diet, exercise and taking care of your body. For information on performance schedules and locations, call 776-8477.

The San Francisco Children's Art Center offers instruction in painting, drawing, sculpture, and printmaking for children ages 2 to 12. These specially directed classes allow each child to progress at his or her own rate while working side by side exploring the organized freedom of the studio. The small classes ensure individual attention, and parent conferences close each session. The summer session runs from June through August. For information, call 771-0292.

The Oceanic Society hosts a variety of children's activities every summer. The Sea Camp is a series of two-week sessions for ages 8 through 14, concentrating on environmental and marine science topics. Students learn through hands-on activities, games, experiments, and the exploration of marine habitats. Each session ends with an overnight camping trip. The Sail Camp is also a series of two-week sessions, for ages 11 through 17. Students engage in an intensive learn-to-sail program of sailing, boating safety and seamanship, stressing individual self-confidence and working together as a team. Sea Camp and Sail Camp run from June through August. For information, call 441-5970.

The Blue Bear School of Music will offer a special "Guitar Month at Blue Bear" during July. Teenagers from 14 and up can engage in a month of intensive instruction in modern guitar techniques. Other classes include music theory, lead playing, special seminars and manufacturer demonstrations. The session runs from July 6 through August 1. For information, call 673-3600.
